

Safeguarding:

As part of our safeguarding, we provide information for parents on a variety of topics. Below is more information we would like to share.

Fabricated or induced illness (FII)

FII is a rare form of child abuse. It happens when a parent or carer exaggerates or deliberately causes symptoms of illness in the child.

The parent or carer tries to convince doctors that the child is ill, or that their condition is worse than it really is. The parent or carer does not necessarily intend to deceive doctors, but their behaviour is likely to harm the child. For example, the child may have unnecessary treatment or tests, be made to believe they're ill, or have their education disrupted.

FII used to be known as "Munchausen's syndrome by proxy" (not to be confused with Munchausen's syndrome, where a person pretends to be ill or causes illness or injury to themselves).

Behaviours in FII can include a parent or carer who:

- ♦ persuades healthcare professionals that their child is ill when they're healthy
- ♦ exaggerates or lies about their child's symptoms
- ♦ manipulates test results to suggest the child is ill
- ♦ deliberately induces symptoms of illness

Cases where the parent or carer wrongly reports symptoms are much more common than cases where they induce illness in the child.

Parent in Prison

It is estimated that approximately 3% of children (so potentially one child in every average class of 30 children / young people) have a parent in prison, whilst there are others who have some other family member in prison. There is however no formal record of who these children are and whether they are receiving support, often meaning that they are a hidden cohort. There can be many barriers to children and young people telling us that they have a family member in prison, for example shame, stigma, and embarrassment. You may find that children have been told that their family member is "staying away", therefore not knowing the true reason as to why that person is not around.

When it is a parent in prison, children and young people can feel isolated and ashamed. They may have been told not to talk about the situation or may not know the words to use in order to tell friends and others in the family what has happened and how they are feeling. If the crime was serious in nature, there is the potential that other families will know what has happened and the child / young person could have to live with the resultant embarrassment.

Children with a family member in prison may be experiencing a range of emotions including loss, anger, upset, confusion, and guilt, particularly if the person in prison is their parent. This may also bring conflict – e.g., their parent is still their parent, but they are in prison. As professionals we need to understand what the child has been told and support them around this.

UNICEF Rights of the Child

Article 37: Children in detention

Children who are accused of breaking the law should not be killed, tortured, treated cruelly, put in prison forever, or put in prison with adults. Prison should always be the last choice and only for the shortest possible time. Children in prison should have legal help and be able to stay in contact with their family.

Our values focus this half term is Humility

Hello everyone,

I'm Mr Soerjowidjojo, quite a mouthful I know, so Mr Jojo is just fine. I first joined St Clement's in February coming from a background of working with secondary school aged kids and what a change of pace it is, but a refreshing one! The staff here have been so supportive in easing me in to working with the smaller kids.

I work with year 2 as a teaching assistant and they are a joy to work with. With so many different characters I have so many different days. They never fail to keep my days interesting and fun. I've also had the pleasure of working with children from other year groups through enrichment, trips and clubs and have enjoyed every experience.

It's been quite a busy week in year 1 and 2 with a lot of packing as it is our last day in our huts. But while we have to leave behind our homely classrooms, we are looking forward to our upcoming trips. Year 2 have been recently learning about castles and will get to see one in real life next week!

Trips for the common wealth games are also taking place next week so I hope everyone participating is ready and all set. But most importantly, have fun (and win us some medals if you can).

Have a lovely weekend everyone and enjoy the sun.

Mr Soerjowidjojo - Teaching Assistant

Building Work Reminder

Parent's and Carer's E-Safety Session

2pm - Thursday 14th July

We are inviting all parent's and carers to this session where we will look at different websites that are potentially harmful for the children and how we can keep the children safe and educate them of the dangers of a range of online content.

It is important as many parents attend the workshop as possible as the children are at an age and stage where they are exploring online content independently and making choices based on what they are seeing and hearing.

Year 6 Sleepover

The sleepover for year 6 has been moved from Friday 8th July to Friday 15th July as we are now aware that it will be EID over that weekend. Letters will be sent out next week explaining everything parents need to know about the sleepover.

We hope that parents will allow their children to attend as it will be a small step in developing independence with them. Keep an eye out for the letter and if you have any further questions please call the school office.

WOODLANDS
ADVENTURE

Next week the first 2 classes will visit Woodlands. While they are out for the day they will take part in a variety of activities. We have listed the different items that they will need to bring so you can get prepared ahead of the day.

Kit List

- ☐ Waterproof jacket
- ☐ Swimming costume/shorts
- ☐ Outdoor shoes x2
- ☐ Towel
- ☐ Old warm clothing as there is a strong chance of them getting muddy! (Two sets of clothing).

Queen's Portrait and Poetry Winners

During our Jubilee week the children used their art and design skills they have been developing this year to create portraits of Queen Elizabeth II and to make crowns. We held a whole school competition and the winners of the portrait competition were announced this week.

The competition was fierce, there were so many excellent portraits in a range of styles from abstract to pop art to renaissance. The winning portraits are going to be transferred to canvases and put up around school to celebrate the children's fine work. A further selection of work will be backed and displayed altogether.

The children worked really hard on their artwork and they should all be proud of what they produced.
